| Description | The human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccination programme's primary aim is to reduce the incidence of cervical cancer in women. Over 2.3 million girls have received three doses of HPV vaccine in England since the start of the programme in September 2008. In September 2014 the programme was changed to a two dose schedule for the routine cohort. In England the first dose is offered to girls in Year 8 (aged 12-13 years) and the second dose recommended 12 months in Year 9 (aged 13-14 years) although some local areas are choosing to schedule the second dose from six months after the first. This change to the former ISB approved standard, HPV Immunisation (ISB 0133) reflects that change. In addition, from 2014/15, the collection is reduced to one annual survey: local authority level data will be collected on the number of girls aged 12-13 years who receive one or two doses of the HPV vaccine. In addition, data will be collected on girls aged 13-14 years who were offered vaccine under the previous 3-dose schedule. All data is aggregate. From September 2015 onwards, the collection will only ask for the number of girls within the current year and the previous year's routine cohort who received one or two doses of HPV vaccine (ie. assess one and two dose coverage in school years 8 and 9). The data are collected via ImmForm, a web-based system provided by PHE. The ImmForm website provides a manual online data submission function for NHS England local teams and other data providers, together with relevant survey information and guidance for the HPV vaccine coverage collection. PHE is responsible for managing ImmForm, as well as |
